For Secretary’s Day, don’t just give your employees a pat on the back.
Give them a whole back rub!

Your staff is a big part of your company’s success. They work hard at getting the work done, meeting deadlines, keeping customers happy, doing sales, and supporting operations. What are you doing to show your appreciation for your staff and the contribution they are making to your business?

This year, Secretary’s Day is April 21st and companies across Canada and the States will be recognizing the contribution made by their staff. And to celebrate their employees’ value, more and more companies across Ontario have been turning to Relax to the Max, the On-Site Seated Massage specialists.

Relax to the Max is the leading provider of seated massage in Canada. With over 70 practitioners in the Toronto area, we can work with companies of any size – from ten employees to one thousand employees. And with a network of practitioners across Canada and the U.S., we can likely take care of your branch offices anywhere.

What is On-Site Seated Massage? It’s a short, seated massage routine done through the clothing in an ergonomically designed chair that is brought right to your office. Focusing on key tension areas in the neck, shoulders, back and arms, a typical session lasts anywhere from five to thirty minutes. The massage is designed to eliminate stress and leave your employee feeling rejuvenated and energized. It’s the perfect way to demonstrate your appreciation for the efforts of your staff.

Your employees will love it! You cannot give your employees any other service for which they will be more appreciative. It is by far a more memorable “thank you” than chocolates, flowers, or a special meal. It sends a strong message that you care about their wellbeing and morale improves dramatically! Karen MacKay from Goodman and Carr had this to say:

“We extend our sincere thanks to you and your practitioners for working your “magic” on us. The feedback we have received has been phenomenal – all were thrilled with their massages. Thank you once again for providing this excellent service to us.”

You might be thinking, “I can’t bring massage into our office. It doesn’t fit our image. We’re a respectable, conservative business.” Those were the exact thoughts of many of our customers. Many were very apprehensive about its implementation until they saw how well it worked in their companies. Relax to the Max is used by established companies with stellar reputations. They include companies like IBM, Kellogg, Dell, American Express, Canadian Airlines and Northern Telecom to name just a few. They also include more than a dozen law firms including Tory, Tory, DesLauriers and Binnington; Stikeman Elliot; Goodman and Carr; Fraser and Beatty; and more.

But isn’t massage expensive? Not at all! With Relax to the Max, you’ll find a surprisingly affordable service. In fact, many companies bring Seated Massage into their workplace on a regular basis to help manage employee stress and improve performance.

Secretary’s Day is one of the busiest times of the year for us and numerous companies have already scheduled massage for that day (including four large law firms). We recommend making arrangements to reserve massage for your firm as soon as possible to avoid disappointment.

Please take a few moments to look over the brochure we’ve enclosed. If you are interested in finding out how affordable this is or would like to find out how easily Seated Massage can work in your company, give us a call at (416) 962-7441. There is absolutely no obligation.

Sincerely,

Eric Brown, Director

P.S. It’s hard to really appreciate the benefits of this service unless you’ve tried it yourself. We would love the opportunity to come to your office and give you and anyone else involved in making decisions a free demonstration so that you can experience the results first hand. Simply call Relax to the Max and we’ll set up a time that’s convenient for you.
